17 KILLED AT SCHOOL

‘No words’: Horror as students and adults die in a barrage of bullets

The New York Times

PARKLAND, FLA. » A heavily armed young man barged into his former high school about an hour northwest of Miami on Wednesday, opening fire on terrified students and teachers and leaving a death toll of 17 that could rise even higher, authorities said. Students huddled in horror in their classrooms, with some of them training their cellphones on the carnage, capturing sprawled bodies, screams and gunfire that began with a few shots and then continued with more and more. The dead included students and adults, some of whom were shot outside the school and others inside the sprawling three-story building.

The gunman, armed with a semi-automatic AR-15 rifle, was identified as Nikolas Cruz, 19, who had been expelled from the school, authorities said. He began his shooting rampage outside Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in this suburban neighborhood shortly before dismissal time around 2:40 p.m. He then made his way inside and proceeded down hallways he knew well, firing at students and teachers who were scurrying for cover, the authorities said.

“Oh my God! Oh my God!” one student yelled over and over in one video circulating on social media, as more than 40 gunshots boomed in the background.

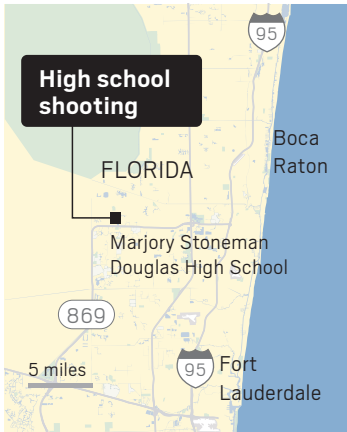

By the end of the rampage, Cruz had killed 12 people inside the school and three outside it, including someone standing on a street corner, Broward County Sheriff Scott Israel said. Two more

Federal immigration officials said Wednesday they have arrested more than 100 people who are in violation of immigration laws as part of an ongoing operation in the Los Angeles area that began Sunday. U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement spokeswoman Sarah Rodriguez said their Los Angeles-area team is targeting about 400 people across the seven counties they cover. ICE officials said in a statement that they are focusing on “individuals who pose a threat to national security, public safety and border security.” “This means that, ideally, we are working with local police and county jails to identify public safety threats in their custody, who are also in the country illegally, for deportation,” the agency said in a statement. They added that in “uncooperative jurisdictions” such as Los Angeles, they are being forced to “focus additional resources to conduct at-large arrests in the community, putting officers, the general public and the aliens at risk and

SAN BERNARDINO » Water agencies in the San Bernardino Valley imported a record level of water from Northern California last year, and most of that was used to recharge groundwater, officials say. Of the record 78,496 acre-feet of State Water Project water from Northern California, about 70 percent was used to recharge the San Bernardino Basin, which in the fall of 2016 was at its lowest level in history, said Bob Tinch, deputy general manager for resources at the San Bernardino Valley

Municipal Water District, the region’s water wholesaler. Where the basin ended up in 2017 is still being analyzed, he said. The amount of water imported last year, Tinch said, was the greatest amount imported in a single year since Valley District began importing from the State Water Project in 1972, Tinch said. “About 70 percent of our deliveries for 2017 were for groundwater recharge,” Tinch said, with the remaining water being delivered directly to Valley District’s retail water agency customers, including East Valley Water
